

American Legion Baseball Recruiting & Eligibility Rules

Because of the complexity of American Legion Baseball rules, while not all inclusive, this summary is intended to provide basic information pertaining to your summer baseball program options – to help you determine the team(s) for which you are eligible to tryout/play. Since individual situations vary, this summary may not cover every specific case, so we encourage you to provide us with your home address and school attendance information, so we can investigate your eligibility options further under Minnesota American Legion Baseball Rules.

- For the 2010 season, those born on or after January 1, 1991 – including high school graduates – are eligible to compete.
- A “Base School” is a high school that is the home base for a Legion team. (Mounds View High School is the Base School for Tri-City Red.) Base School teams must add up the total enrollment of all the high schools represented by players on its roster, and the sum cannot exceed 3,600. Teams who exceed 3,600 are ineligible to compete in Minnesota American Legion Baseball.
- A “Non-Base School” is any public or private high school that is not the home base for a Legion team.
- “Legal Domicile” (player residence) is determined as of March 31 of each year. (In the case of divorced or legally separated parents, the player must declare which address he wishes to use as his legal domicile, and that address must continue to be used for the remainder of his Legion Baseball eligibility.) A player’s “school of attendance” is also determined as of March 31 of each year.
- A player’s Legal Domicile is used to determine the team(s) for which he is eligible to play, if the high school he attends 1) is not a Base School, 2) is a private school, or 3) if the high school he attends is a Base School, but he did not make the team.
- Generally, a player who attends a Base School must tryout for that team, before considering any other teams. If a player does not make the team, his options are as follows:
 - ❑ Ask for a release (waiver), and then try out for the Base School team that is the next closest to his Legal Domicile. (See list of area Base School teams.)
 - ❑ To determine which Base School team is the next closest, Mapquest.com must be used (using shortest driving distance, under the “get directions” feature).
 - ❑ If the player does not make that team through a tryout, he can ask for a release from that team, and then contact the second closest team to his Legal Domicile about trying out.
 - ❑ The team that he ultimately makes must add that player’s school enrollment in determining whether or not it meets/exceeds the 3,600 threshold – as well as the enrollments of any other teams for which he tried out, but did not make.
- A player who attends a Non-Base School (or any private school) must first determine if a) his school of attendance is located within the attendance boundary of a Base School – and/or b) if he lives within the attendance boundary of a Base School. If so, he should contact such team(s) regarding registration and tryouts. If not, using Mapquest.com, he must determine which Base School team is nearest to his Legal Domicile, and contact that team regarding registration and tryouts. While there are variations in each unique situation, generally
 - ❑ If a player’s school of attendance is located within the attendance area of a Base School team and the player’s Legal Domicile is located in a different Base School team’s attendance area, the player is eligible to make a one-time option election, choosing one of the two teams. This election is valid for the duration of his Legion Baseball eligibility.
 - ❑ This one-time election is available to a player who attends a private high school, even if the private school he attends is a Base School.
 - ❑ As above, the player must first tryout. If he makes the team, the team must add the enrollment of his school to their total enrollment accumulation.
- In addition to American Legion Baseball, players should not overlook investigating the quality programs that are available through Shoreview Area Youth Baseball, www.sayb.org.
